A Message from Trent Emerson

Employee continuing education and development are key differentiators between success and failure.

Keeping pace with rapidly changing technology is a constant challenge. I believe that if we are going to continue to succeed we must focus our emphasis on the value of human capital – you and your employees!

Ben's Paint Supply is committed to continuing professional education and development for our own employees, and now we can help you with yours. That is why we've established Ben's Online University so that you can acquire the core competencies and skills needed to compete in this fast-changing environment.

Ben's Online University now provides you with the ability to deliver a wide variety of subject matter in order to meet the diverse training needs of all your employees—from highly technical topics to software application instruction to business skills development. Online instruction can be delivered efficiently and allows you to take advantage of training anytime regardless of your location. You can select from any of over 4,000 courses! Although they are fee-based, with the backing of PPG we are able to offer them at competitive prices and extra discounts for multi-course packages. You can even try one for free!

With Ben's Paint Supply's philosophy of investing in the development of employees you can ensure that you will retain your competitive edge and allow you to better anticipate and address the challenges of the future.
